

Author Daniel W. Evans

Let it Snow and Let it Show

Let it Snow

Snow is something we expect during certain seasons. As a matter of fact, the expectation and desire to have snow is so great in some that I believe they would make it snow, if they could. Snow is beautiful and as some say, it cleans the air. However, it does seem to make the air fresher even during extreme temperatures. Being in it seems to bring the kid out of all of us. Family and friends have much fun while it is falling and accumulating everywhere.

'Let it Snow' is a phrase used during the winter months when the thermometer is falling and there is an overcast in the sky. Many say, "it looks like snow!" We can discern the sky and raise our expectations to meet what we think is the inevitable. We make calls, send texts and emails to say it looks like it, it is coming or it is falling. Plans are made to stock up with food and other essentials to get snowed in. This is just a brief synopsis of what happens when the phrase 'Let it Snow' actually comes to fruition.

Let it Show

There are other seasons of life that will constitute an expectation hype. For an example, when someone realizes they have a purpose for more than just existing from week to week, they should acknowledge it and allow change to take place. Change is what will move them from normal routines to setting new goals and establishing action plans to meet them. When these measures are taken they not only help themselves, but anyone they influence. An expectation of greatness and fulfillment begins to develop. Another phrase that speaks of these new developments is 'Let it Show.' I have heard this associated with money, fame, influence, and so on. When you have it, it shows.

Our environmental seasons cannot be changed. We cannot bring snow or make it leave. However, the seasons of life offers change. In addition, we have a choice on how we react to them and allow them to change us. When you recognize opportunity and allow positive change to take place by applying proper action, it will show. People recognize change in others. Therefore, 'Let it Show' and shine through your season of positive change. Do not just let it snow without also letting it show!